Al-Fatiha

Lesson 1 · surah 1 · the opening

📖 The story: Al-Fatiha

Read together, part by part.

Part 1 – Seventeen times a day

Bilal is sixteen. One day he counts how often he recites Al-Fatiha. Two rak'as at fajr, four at dhuhr, four at asr, three at maghrib, four at isha. "Seventeen times!" he says to his sister Amira. "Every day the same seven sentences." Amira laughs. "And do you know what they mean?" Bilal hesitates. He knows the Arabic words very well. The meaning much less. That evening he looks it up.

☆ Without Al-Fatiha there is no prayer.

hesitate = doubt before you say something · meaning = what something means

Part 2 – A conversation with Allah

Bilal reads the translation. The first verses are praise: Allah is the Lord of the worlds, the Most Gracious, the King of the Last Day. Then comes a promise: You alone we worship, You alone we ask for help. And at the end a request: guide us to the straight path. Amira tells him a hadith: Allah answers every verse of Al-Fatiha. "When you say: all praise is for Allah, Allah says: My servant has praised Me." Bilal is quiet. "So it is actually a conversation."

☆ Al-Fatiha is a conversation between you and Allah.

praise = saying something good about someone · promise = saying you will certainly do something

Part 3 – Slower

The next morning Bilal prays fajr. For the first time he recites Al-Fatiha slowly. At Ihdina s-sirata l-mustaqim he thinks of his exam, of his friends, of the choices he has to make. The straight path: that is what he needs. After the prayer he says to Amira: "I've been reading it too fast for seventeen years." "You're sixteen," she laughs. "Even so," says Bilal.

☆ Recite Al-Fatiha slowly and think about the meaning.

the straight path = the right way in life · choice = decision between two things

💬 Let's talk: At which verse of Al-Fatiha would you most like to pause? Why?

💡 Did you know? – Al-Fatiha

- Al-Fatiha means: the opening. It stands at the front of the Quran.
- It is also called Umm al-Quran, the mother of the Quran, because the whole message comes together in it.
- After Al-Fatiha we say Amin: O Allah, accept it.

Al-Ikhlas

Lesson 2 · surah 112 · sincerity

📖 The story: Al-Ikhlas
Read together, part by part.

Part 1 – A question at the internship

Ilyas is doing an internship at a garage. During the break his colleague Kevin asks: “What does your God actually look like?” For a moment Ilyas doesn’t know what to say. “He doesn’t look like anything we know,” he says then. “There is nothing like Him.” Kevin nods. “That’s hard to imagine.” “Exactly,” says Ilyas. “And you don’t have to.”

☆ There is nothing and no one like Allah.

internship = learning at a workplace · imagine = make a picture in your head

Part 2 – The same question, long ago

At home his mother tells him that people asked the Prophet the same question. “Describe your Lord to us,” they said. Then Surah Al-Ikhlas came. Everything is in four short verses: Allah is One. Everyone needs Him, He needs no one. He has no children and no parents. No one is equal to Him. “That is why the Prophet said this surah is worth a third of the Quran,” she says.

☆ Al-Ikhlas is worth a third of the Quran.

describe = tell what something is like · equal = the same

Part 3 – The answer for Kevin

The next day Ilyas writes the four sentences of the meaning on a note. He gives it to Kevin. Kevin reads it twice. “Short and clear,” he says. “I can work with that.” Ilyas is happy. He said nothing difficult, only what Allah Himself says about Himself. That evening he recites Al-Ikhlas three times before going to sleep, as the Prophet did.

☆ Al-Ikhlas: Allah is One, He needs no one.

clear = easy to understand · note = small piece of paper with text 💬 Let’s talk: How would you explain to a friend in your own words who Allah is?

Lesson 3 · surah 113 · the daybreak

📖 The story: Al-Falaq

Read together, part by part.

Part 1 – Afraid in the dark

Hanae is fifteen. She comes home late from the library. It is November and by five o’clock it is already dark. A group of boys is hanging around in the street. Her heart beats fast. She keeps walking and quietly whispers the words her grandmother taught her: Qul a‘udhu bi-rabbi l-falaq. She walks on calmly. At home she locks the door and takes a deep breath.

☆ When you are afraid, you seek protection with Allah.

library = place where you borrow books · whisper = talk very quietly

Part 2 – What does it mean?

At the table Hanae tells her father. He explains the surah. “Falaq is the daybreak, the moment the light breaks through the night. You seek protection with the Lord of that light. Against the evil in creation, against the evil of the dark night, against magic and against the envy of someone who is envious.” “Envy too?” asks Hanae. “Yes,” says her father. “Envy can destroy a lot.”

☆ Al-Falaq: protection against the evil outside you.

daybreak = first light of the morning · envy = not wanting someone else to have something

Part 3 – Not afraid but sensible

Her father also says: “The surah doesn’t replace your common sense. Take a well-lit road, call if you are late, go together if you can.” Hanae nods. The next time she asks her friend Nora to come along. On the way she teaches Nora the meaning of Al-Falaq. “Beautiful,” says Nora. “The light that breaks through the night.”

Lesson 5 · surah 108 · abundance

📖 The story: Al-Kawthar
Read together, part by part.

Part 1 – Laughed at

Part 1 – Four hours a day

Ines looks at her screen time. Four hours and twelve minutes a day. “That’s more than a working day a week,” she calculates. She gets a shock. Her friend Douae laughs. “Everybody does that.” But Ines keeps thinking about it.

☆ Your time is precious: you never get it back.

screen time = time on your phone or computer · precious = worth a lot

Part 2 – By time

In Islam class Mr Karim reads Surah Al-Asr. “Allah swears by time,” he says. “He only does that by something very important. Every person is in loss, except those who do four things: believe, do good deeds, advise each other to the truth, and advise each other to be patient.” Imam ash-Shafi‘i said: if people only understood this surah well, it would be enough.

☆ Whoever believes, does good and helps others, does not lose.

swear = say something very solemnly · patient = able to wait calmly

Part 3 – Helping each other

Ines sets a limit on her apps: two hours a day. With the time left over she helps her little brother with reading. She tells Douae about the surah. “Advise each other,” she says. “That’s why I’m telling you too.” Douae rolls her eyes, but a week later she sets a limit too.

☆ Advise each other to do good, with patience.

limit = a line you don’t cross · advise = say that something is good to do 💬 Let’s talk: What do you waste a lot of time on? What would you do with an extra hour a day?
